REDGALLERY

Rare Earth Decor Gallery

In the heart of the city of Hamburg, Germany, Andreas Guhr has created a unique experience for those with an appreciation for fine rare objects and the natural wonders of the earth. This exquisite gallery displays museum quality objects for luxury interior design and amazing geogenic art. Beautiful and fascinating at the same time, each piece compels the viewer to linger over its stunning aesthetics and tantalizing origin and natural history.

The RED GALLERY shows premium mineral and fossil masterpieces that can enrich elegant architecture and provide luxurious interior design accents with an emphasis on satisfying results. This gallery emphasizes the zeitgeist and the flair for individual sophistication.

The gallery links exquisite objects from nature to lifestyle, interior design and architecture. Each and every object is hand-selected for its uniqueness, beauty and perfection.

The story

Wonderful specimens from all over the world, comprising rare fossils of museum quality as well as petrified wood and valuable minerals, are displayed in a way never before seen.

The gallery represents decades of experience by Andreas Guhr with the best contacts to mines, fossil sites, museums and renowned universities in combination with highly skilled team members and an excellent in-house preparation laboratory.

Until now, such high-quality natural objects have only been seen as exhibits in natural history museums. For Andreas Guhr, it has been a lifelong dream and a great challenge to abandon the old patterns and display these natural objects in a new context.

Beauties in all sizes

The fascinating and stimulating dialogue between man-made visual arts and natural art was already initiated through several exhibitions with contemporary artists in major cities around Europe.

As with other fine works of art, these rare museum quality fossils and exceptional minerals represent a sound and aesthetic investment, having been proven to increase in value year after year.

The showroom for natural history objects in central Hamburg provides a contemporary setting in a design-oriented ambience.

It demonstrates the intrinsic value of the geo-aesthetic of the exhibits on display, created by Andreas Guhr in an area of more than 600 m².

All objects have been purposely selected as art and, as such, they will enliven the atmosphere in any room.

Exquisite minerals

Natural stone objects, refined by artisans or not, have the same prominence as fine art when displayed in contemporary or classic homes.

Andreas Guhr

passionate dealer, collector and gallerist

At international trade fairs, the name Andreas Guhr stands for the highest quality due to his many years of experience, reliability and an international, exclusive network.

He is the managing director of the RED GALLERY, and co-founder of DMF, member of IAPS and founder of the well-known Hamburg Mineral Show, one of the largest trade fairs in Germany.

In addition to conducting a successful business with fossils and minerals, he has also led expeditions to the most distant corners of the world.

He explored emerald mines in Colombia, and in 1992 he organized the first German-Mongolian expedition to the Gobi desert and accompanied a team of scientists from GEO magazine, which searched for meteorites in the Sahara. Further expeditions during the following years through Turkey, Afghanistan and Persia led the adventurer with his keen sense for the beauty of precious stones to rare finds in caves, mountain ranges and stone deserts.

Andreas Guhr, born in Hamburg, Germany, is considered one of the foremost international experts on minerals, fossils and gems.

A certified gemologist and diamond appraiser, he is also recognized as an expert in minerals and fossils by the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce and Industry.
